The Gaelic League was founded in Detroit in December, 1920, and has always been non-political and non-sectarian. It is open to men and women alike, and is unlimited in the matter of membership, subject to the rules and regulations governing same as laid down in this Constitution.

At its inception it was affiliated with the parent organization in Ireland and was known as the Terrance McSwiney branch of the Gaelic League. Later on, connection with the Gaelic League of Ireland ceased and while for a time, through the working of letterheads and other printed matter it was designated as Gaelic League of Detroit, it nevertheless has always been generally known as the Gaelic League. The Gaelic League is an Irish Organization in the fullest sense of the word, as clearly as an Irish Organization can be lawfully maintained in America. It has at all times, ardently supported and liberally contributed to every workable effort towards establishing a single independent government for all of Ireland. All through these years, however, although the organization had adopted a Constitution at the time it was established, copies of same have never been distributed to all of its members. Early this year (1937) the availability of supplying all the supplying all the members with copies was realized. Before doing so, however, it was decided to check the instrument over throughout in detail, making whatever changes seemed to be warranted. The outcome of this effort is the constitution presented herewith.
